First Down with Fr. Eric

Dear Friends,

At the end of a calendar year and the beginning of a new year, there is a review in the news, of people whom we lost through death. Some are well known men and women while others might be more known in different circles. As we enter the year 2023, there is a little more distance from the events of the last century. On Monday we honor the holiday of Martin Luther King, Jr. and we recall the many people whose lives were dedicated to civil rights.

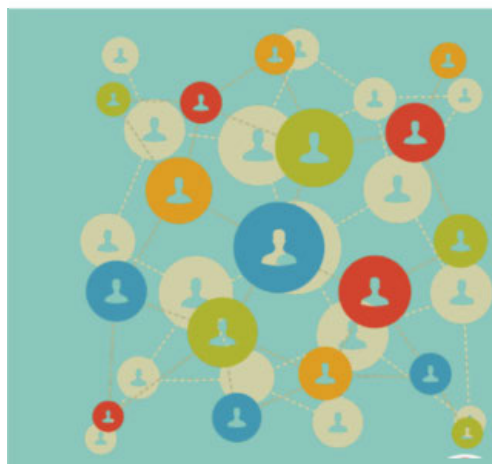

I preside at many funerals and I often wonder what God thinks of our humanity as he welcomes into his Kingdom the men and women who had to dedicate their lives to overcome prejudice, discrimination and hatred. To be welcomed into a kingdom where there is no separation, but all are one under the love that God came to give through Jesus Christ. What joys of life are missed out on when brave people live in fear, are mocked or opposed for desiring an end to hatred? The color of any skin can move some people to discriminate, or judge harshly those who look and act differently. I can only imagine what God thinks when humanity returns to him through our deaths.

The ultimate desire would be one day that no one has to dedicate their lives to end hatred of any kind, yet we know that day has not arrived. We need to look at this holiday of Martin Luther King, Jr. as a reminder of the many lives of people who sacrificed to allow people to one day live in freedom from hatred. I wish that people would be able to concentrate on other areas of life to enjoy what God has created, but for now we keep working with God's grace to change hearts and allow unity to grow.

I remember in my prayers this week all the people who have sacrificed their lives for an end to racial discrimination. May God honor their lives.

Peace in Christ,

Fr. Eric

"Well, I don't know what will happen now. We've got some difficult days ahead. But it doesn't matter with me now. Because I've been to the mountaintop. And I don't mind. Like any man, I would like to live a long life. Longevity has its place, but I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will. And He's allowed me to go up to the mountain. And I've looked over. And I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you. But I want you to know tonight, that we, as a people, will get to the promised land. And I'm happy, tonight. I'm not worried about anything. I'm not fearing any man. Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord." MLK, Jr.

Share Your Faith...by Torri Winn

I am a team member with our Adult Initiation Ministry and what a joy it is to walk alongside those who are discerning if they should live their faith as a Catholic Christian! I remember a time, though, when I felt like Jeremiah in Chapter 1:6, where God calls him and he says, "I know not how to speak; I am too young." That was how I felt when I was first asked to teach religious education at 20 years old. Yes, I went to Catholic school all the way through college, and yes, I went to Mass almost every day from birth onward, but what did I REALLY KNOW ABOUT GOD?! That line even resonates as we get older and is sometimes the reason we don't really talk about our faith to others. I hear people all the time say, "Well I don't talk about faith matters, because I might get it wrong." Or, "If they challenge me about what I believe, I won't know what to say," (and what they don't say at the end of that sentence is...and I might look stupid). So we don't share our faith.

Yes, we might not know the answers to their questions, and yes, we may even look uneducated in our faith, but there is one story that can always be told when sharing faith, and that's how Jesus has shown up in our own lives. We've heard at Mass that the Word of God isn't just for "them then" but "for us now!" So how do you figure that out? Now it helps to be aware of how God shows up. And the best place to develop a firm foundation is to read in the scriptures how God has shown up for those in the scriptures, and seeing if there are any similarities in our own lives. I think, for me, there is one more element that is required to recognize our story in the stories of scripture and that is an act of surrender, or maybe as St. Paul says it, a renewal of the mind, that acknowledges that my story is indeed in that book written so long ago. The Lord says to Jeremiah, "Don't say, 'I am too young' (or for us in the more mature crowd - 'I'm afraid I might look stupid if I get it wrong') - the Lord says, "to whomever I send you, you shall go, whatever I command you, you shall speak. Have no fear before them, because I am with you..." He is saying just be open to God. Surrender to God so that He can use you in ways you could never imagine. Like talking to people about faith in Adult Initiation or writing an article in the church bulletin!

The Lord goes on to tell Jeremiah after he touches his mouth, that He will "Place His Words in his Mouth!" That's the wonderful HOLY SPIRIT! So we don't even have to worry about what to say - but only if we surrender it all to the Lord before we even part our lips, trusting that He is there and will give us what we need.

So when we are tempted to say "what do I know" remember the many times God has shown up in your life, and ask the Holy Spirit to guide your tongue, thoughts and actions to "build and to plant in the portion of the Kingdom called Scottsdale Arizona," or wherever you find yourself!

Parental Awareness about Trafficking

Two of the most common forms of Human Trafficking are sex trafficking and labor trafficking. Sex traffickers prey upon the vulnerable teen population by offering false promises of love, security and material temptations. This social issue recognizes no socio-economic background. The numerous social media platforms and easy accessibility to the internet make it more difficult to be vigilant for parents. Here are a few tips to help keep your teens safe:

Listen and be proactive: Teens struggle with peer pressure and social acceptance. Continued communication about their daily lives away from home helps keep an awareness that you are active in their lives.

Encourage extracurricular activities: Athletics, arts, and volunteer activities help build self-esteem and self-worth while developing interpersonal skills. Studies show that inactive teens spend up to nine hours every day consuming media.

Know who is reaching out to your teen: Stay vigilant with whom your teen is regularly communicating. Traffickers contact their victims online, through social media, and game apps. Traffickers look for messages like "I just got into a fight with my parents" or "My parents don't understand me." Especially any statement that screams for attention after a misunderstanding.

Advise them how to say no and put a contact plan in place should there be a need for them to remove themselves from a bad situation.

Question when you see sudden possession of new items like electronics, purses, clothing, jewelry, makeup, etc. or a sudden change in appearance/clothing. Are they in possession of unexplained cash or a "second" cell phone?

Ensure that your teen knows your phone number by heart and not relying on a contact list. If they need to reach out in an emergency from a different phone should their phone get lost or confiscated, they will know how to contact you.

Remind your teen that anything posted on the internet is there forever. Know your teens' passwords and regularly check their activity. You have that right as a parent.

Be aware of red flags like missing a lot of school or rapid decline in school performance.

Trust your instincts as a parent. If something feels wrong, acknowledge it! Don't ignore or rationalize it. Reach out for guidance if necessary.

Look for further information and a link in this week's Connection composed by the ASU School of Social Work.

If you suspect Human Trafficking, call the National Human Trafficking Hotline at 1-888-373-7888 or Text 233733 or visit humantraffickinghotline.org.
